Ŷ

On the bus, everyone else has someone to talk to. Row after row of chattering kisk, excited for their a demonos to star, for summer to start. I slip into the seat next to Joanie Engstrom, who is cating an apple from the top down, core and all. Joanie and J aren't friends, exactly, but we're allies—someone to pair up with in class on group projects, someone to sit next to on the bus when all the other scates are full. She smilles at me, then looks back down at the TBible open in her lap—well-worm and Postimented from all fieldime of use. It most sure what more there is to glean from those pages after she's read them so many times, but I'm not one to judge since I've seen all the available episodes of Demon Heart upwards of a dozen times.

As Joanie reads, taking another bite of her apple, I look past her and watch Pine Bluff pass by out the windows, all six glorious stoplights. Annoyingly, I can't stop thinking about what Kyle Annoyingly, I can't stop timiting about what kyle said. Am I in love with the gays in Demon Heart? Maybe, Rico Quiroz and Forest Reed, who play Heart and Smokey, are undeniably attractive people. I've spent more than a few aftermoons gazing at pictures of them, the slope of their juwlines, the rough texture of their stubble; the swell of their lips.

Rico, the older one, has amazing dark curly hair, an open face, perfect soft brown skin, and an easy smile. He comes off as approachable, kind, warm. I can see why fans are always tweeting Dad at him—I want him to rub my back and tell me I'm doing a good job, I want him to
